United Nations Human Rights
70th Anniversary Celebration for the Universal Declaration of Human Rights

A proposal for Member States

"Where, after all, do universal human rights begin?

In small places, close to home - so close and so small that they cannot be seen on any maps of the world.

*Yet they are the world of the individual person;
the neighbourhood he lives in;
the school or college he attends; the factory, farm or office where he works. (...)*

Unless these rights have meaning there, they have little meaning anywhere."

*Eleanor Roosevelt, First Chairperson of the Commission on Human Rights which drafted the Universal Declaration of Human Rights
- remarks delivered at the United Nations in New York on 27 March 1958*

Celebrating Human Rights

The Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR) turns 70 in 2018!

A milestone document in the global history of human rights, the UDHR is infused with values and ideals drawn from the world over. Drafted by UN representatives from diverse cultural and technical backgrounds, the Declaration was proclaimed by the United Nations General Assembly in Paris on 10 December 1948 as a common standard of achievements for all peoples and all nations.

The UDHR is as relevant today as it was on the day that it was proclaimed. 10 December 2018 will mark its 70th anniversary and the UN Human Rights Office is leading a year-long celebration that will kick-off on 10 December 2017.

This 70th anniversary is an opportunity for the world to celebrate again the gift of the UDHR and thereby affirm the enduring human rights principles and standards that it helped establish. Please do join us.

Anniversary objectives

- PROMOTE: Raise public awareness of the UDHR as a critical milestone for human rights and highlight what it means for people in their everyday life.
- ENGAGE: Mobilise people including key actors to express commitment to and engage in the promotion and protection of human rights.
- REFLECT: Take stock of what has been achieved, of the state of human rights in the world today and reflect upon the challenges and opportunities to come.

Key messages

- The UDHR empowers us all: It establishes the equal dignity and worth of every person. It confirms that the State has a core duty to promote standards of life that enable us to exercise our dignity and equality, in larger freedom.
- Human rights are relevant for all of us, every day. Human rights include our rights to freedom from fear and from want, freedom to speak up, rights to health and education; and to enjoy the benefits of measures to advance economic and social justice.
- Ours is a shared humanity rooted in these universal values. We are inter-connected. These human rights that we have in common, solidarity with each other and fulfilment of human rights responsibilities are what bind us together on our shared planet.

- Equality, justice and freedom prevent violence and sustain peace. Respect for human rights, and sound, impartial rule of law to resolve disputes are at the core of development and peace.
- Whenever and wherever humanity's values are abandoned, we all are at greater risk. We are at a crossroads. Attacks on human rights by people who want to profit from hatred and exploitation erode freedom and equality locally and globally. This can be, must be, resisted.
- We need to stand up for our rights and those of others. Each of us can stand up. We can take action in our own daily lives, to uphold the rights that protect us all and thereby promote the kinship of all human beings.

The anniversary's hashtag is #standup4humanrights. It builds on the UN Human Rights Stand Up campaign, which calls on people to take action for greater freedoms, stronger respect and more compassion for the rights of others.

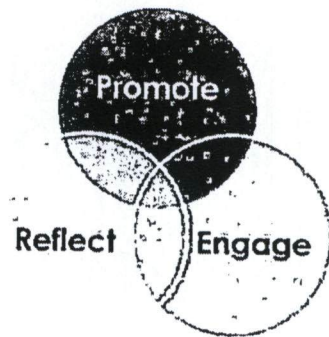

Target audiences

- Member States to engage their citizens too in the promotion and protection of human rights.
- The private sector, leveraging its reach both in terms of its workforces and public communications.
- Civil society, leveraging their reach, organizing ability and alignment of purpose and values.
- The general public, with a particular focus on youth.
- Media, to encourage them to communicate creatively about human rights and the fact of the UDHR anniversary.
- The UN family, with a view to reaffirming, throughout the system, the centrality of the human rights pillar.
- Non-traditional actors (e.g., mayors, cities), with a view to testing how they can promote human Rights.

Anniversary framework

A series of communication assets will be made available by the UN Human Rights Office to support the campaign.

PROMOTE - Raise awareness of what the UDHR is for people in their everyday lives

- A communication toolkit including the visual identity for the UDHR 70th anniversary along with the background and key messages. (October 2017).
- A website dedicated to UDHR70, with information and resources about the campaign and Human Rights (November 2017).
- Information materials will be produced on an ongoing basis in multiple languages that illustrate how the UDHR permeates everyday life, everywhere – booklets, infographics, short films/animations, social media visuals, an exhibition, etc.

In addition, specific projects will aim at promoting the relevance of the UDHR:

- "Add Your Voice" - a project to promote and disseminate the UDHR in over 100 languages. An online application allows people to record themselves reading an article of the UDHR in their own language and share it on social media – encouraging others to do the same. The roll-out of this project is planned for Human Rights Day on 10 December 2017: <https://www.un.org/en/udhr-video/>
- "Geneva For Rights" - which aims at leveraging the presence of the UN Human Rights Office and the various human rights mechanisms in the Swiss city.

ENGAGE - Encourage social mobilisation for human rights

- People will be encouraged to take a "human rights pledge" - #MyDeclaration - and to spread the word online.
- Strategic partnerships and collaboration will be encouraged with a wide range of actors to broaden the reach of our campaign and messages and promote human rights.
- "Art for Human Rights". Human Rights is a powerful and universal "language" that unites us. We will launch a global call to the artistic community to unleash its creativity for rights.

REFLECT - Take stock, look around and look ahead

- A series of thematic discussions will be held in places around the world including in Geneva and New York. The anniversary is a moment to take stock of human rights' achievements, contributions, opportunities and the threats human rights face too. It is a moment to appreciate what has been done, to assess what remains to be achieved and to identify key opportunities for future generations. These discussions will help sharpen our strategic focus on the human rights of yesterday, today and tomorrow, with an eye to broadening engagement for and with rights across disciplines and communities.
- A Human Rights prize will be awarded on 10 December 2018 by the United Nations General Assembly.

How you can get involved

The UDHR70 anniversary is an opportunity - in partnership with the UN Human Rights Office - to express, celebrate and encourage support for human rights and in particular member states' continuing commitment to these universal principles.

Member States may wish to join forces with us on the occasion of Human Rights Day (10th December) and throughout 2018 as well. Governments may wish to also develop their own initiatives, in which case we would be delighted to work with you in shaping those and in helping maximise their potential.

The following list presents some of the options for partnership with the UN Human Rights Office.

- Share the official Human Rights Day and campaign visuals / tweets / posts with the hashtag #standup4humanrights. Encourage Ministries/Missions and other relevant partners to share these through their networks.
- Promote the UDHR and the anniversary's core messages to your constituents perhaps by organizing an awareness campaign using our communication toolkit.
- Organize an exhibition on human rights - or host the UN Human Rights UDHR70 exhibition in prominent public places such as airports, city squares, museums or other.

- Promote and/or participate in the "Add Your Voice" project.

- Encourage your Ministers, Ambassadors and other civil servants to participate in #MyDeclaration and take the human rights pledge.
- Post a video message or blog by your Ministers, Ambassadors and other civil servants on your social media channels and on the official UN channels too.
- Take steps to have the UDHR translated in your national languages, if it has not already been done.
- Consider ratifying any human rights treaties that your country has not yet ratified and/or take specific action to make human rights a reality for your constituents.
- Partner with the UN Human Rights Office to promote and engage people in the UDHR. Let's design a joint project/educational campaigns for specific groups, e.g. for schools and universities (youth) or to change attitude vis-à-vis migrants.
- Support the UDHR70 campaign or, more broadly, the work of the Office, by making a contribution.

Reflect

Organise multi-stakeholder events in your capital, your Embassies, in Geneva and New York presenting why and how you apply the UDHR principles in your country with the participation of a UN Human Rights representative and civil society.

- Take stock and publicise the progress your country has made in human rights over the past 70 years.
- Hold thematic discussions about the challenges and opportunities for human rights yesterday, today and tomorrow.
- Participate in the global events organized by UN Human Rights.
